

KEVIN SAVOIE examines some dying salvinia molesta. The weed is an expanding problem in the waterways of Cameron Parish.

Salvinia proving to be difficult to eradicate here

"We sprayed it, we dried it, we burned it and we salt watered it," Ben Welch said as he stood next to his air boat in the Cameron Creole marsh near here.

The "it" Welsh referred to is Salvinia molesta or giant salvinia - an invasive weed that forms dense mats, which sometimes are several feet thick. The weed was first identified in Cameron Parish in 2001.

The fast-growing aquatic plant can choke a waterway and kill plants and animals underneath its thick covering. It was first discovered in Louisiana at Toledo Bend in 1998 by a biologist with the Sabine River Authority.

Dr. Dearl Sanders, a weed scientist with the LSU AgCenter and research coordinator of the LSU AgCenter's Idlewild Research Station at Clinton, said the weed can clog irrigation systems and even compete with rice crops if it's introduced into rice fields. Native to South America, the plant has been a major problem for Brazil's rice industry and poses a threat to Louisiana farmers.

Welsh, owner of Welch's Airboat Service, has a contract with the Cameron Parish Police Jury and the Cameron Parish Drainage Board to control giant salvinia in 4,000 acres of the marsh known as the Henry-Davis property. The infested region essentially is blocked off from other areas by high levees, roads and ridges.

"We need to prevent salvinia from moving out of the area," Sanders said.

When it was first identified in Cameron Parish, giant salvinia was 4-5 feet thick against bridges, and observers identified an area 5-6 miles long and as wide as 2 miles on the Cameron Drainage Canal.

Since then, Sanders and Kevin Savoie, an LSU AgCenter area fisheries agent in Southwest Louisiana, have Cont. on Page 2

The tax passed by only 18 votes with the final tally being 290 to 278 in favor of the 20-year bond issue.

School Board Member Pat Howerton said the bond money will be used to construct a new wing containing 14 new classrooms at the back of the school.

Also a new kitchen and cafeteria will be built. The present cafeteria seats only about 110 persons; the new one will seat 275.

The school library will be expanded and a centralized computer lab built.

Grand Lake High School, now the largest school in the parish, has a present enrollment of 600 but is expected to go to 620 this fall with the addition of a pre-kindergarten class.

Grand Lake is the fastest growing community in Cameron Parish, with many new homes going up. There has been an influx of Lake Charles residents wishing to build in a less crowded area.

Howerton said the front wing of the school, which was built in the early 1950s, will be torn down to make room for the new kitchen and been working with the local agencies and Welch to control the weed.

In the hope of finding a less-expensive alternative to chemical control, Sanders and Savoie tried salt water this past spring. The Henry-Davis property was pumped nearly dry and flushed with salt water from the Intracoastal Waterway.

"Salt water did more good than anything else," Savoie said

The giant salvinia hasn't reappeared in areas of the marsh where salt water was introduced, officials said.

On the other hand, in areas where levees held back the salt water, giant salvinia presents a never-ending battle being fought with chemicals and other management tools.

Sanders, who said the Cameron Parish infestation is the only one he knows that's close to salt water, is recommending the area be pumped dry and flushed with salt water yearly for about three years.

"Where salt water can get, we just annihilated it," Welch said.

In other spots, Welch still fights the weed with frequent herbicide applications.

Mrs. Toten died Tuesday, July 15, 2003, in a Lake Charles hospital.

She lived in Lake Charles for a number of years prior to moving back to Hackberry. She received a degree in business administration from Vincent Business College in Lake Charles. She was an employee of Ewing Insurance Co. and JTPA office, from which she retired.

covered in May, but after spraying, it was mostly clear in mid-July, he said. All that remain are "little pockets."

"It's like hide and seek," Welch said. "It's not there one day, but it's there later."

Since May 1999, Sanders has been looking for the best method to control giant salvinia. He found that a herbicide called Reward - which is available for use in the state - is the best means of controlling the weed.

One drawback, however, is expense. Reward costs about $80 per acre for the chemical, and the application cost adds even more to the expense.

In Cameron Parish, the Louisiana Department of Wildlife and Fisheries has supplied the Reward, and the local agencies have paid for the application.

One aspect of marsh management is controlled burning, Savoie said. Landowners periodically will burn off the dead, dry grasses on dry ground that emerges during periods of low water.

It was during a burn that Welch discovered fire is not a friend of giant salvinia.

When his crew burned some dry cover, the heat "baked" the salvinia, Welch said. That salvinia didn't come back.

"We have the benefit of a contractor who knows marsh management," Savoie said about Welch.

The Henry-Davis property is used for duck hunting and to graze cattle, Savoie said. But when open water is covered with giant salvinia, the ducks can't land. And even if they did, they'd have nothing to eat.

Since the salvinia control program started, wigeongrass and other grasses that provide food for waterfowl and wildlife are coming back. "We are putting the area back into productivity," Savoie said.

In addition to its threat to recreation and fisheries by clogging lakes, bayous and other waterways, giant salvinia threatens agriculture throughout Southwest Louisiana because it can get into the waterways used in rice production. Sanders said in one area of Brazil, the weed was responsible for a 30-percent loss in rice production.

"There's a direct water link between here (Cameron Parish) and rice-growing areas of the state," Sanders said. "That's where the threat comes in. We're looking at a 30 percent to 40 percent rice yield reduction potential and

The Louisiana Stream Control Commission Friday moved to curtail two sources of Calcasieu River pollution and turned down the request of another Lake Charles industrial plant for a permit to discharge waste into the stream. W. F. Henry, president of the Cameron Parish Police Jury, said the stand of his parish was the same as that of the federal government. "We've been the dumping ground of the industry up the river from us for years and we think it's time to stop," Henry

Henry said the mercury situation not only has forced the closing of a crab processing plant at Hackberry and sharply curtailed commercial fishing operation, but also is having an indirect effect on the parish's shrimp industry.

The trout shootout held on Calcasieu Lake two weeks ago was a great success, with nice speckled trout coming to the weigh-in. Barry Terrell took first place with a 7.69 lb. trout with James Blake weighing a 7.5 lb. trout. The next three places were over 7 lbs. with over 6 lbs. rounding out third place. The youth division also had good catches of trout and James Stark took first place with 6.9 lbs.

LEMESCHE BASS CLUB

The next Lemesche Bass Club meeting will be on Wednesday, Aug. 6. The final tournament of the year will be on Sunday, Aug. 10. Fishing will be in the Amoco Field, and this is a pick your own partner tournament.

These are the standings going into the final tournament. First, Darren Richard, second, Boudreaux, 38.21; third, Tom Hess, 34.39; fourth, Ricky Canik, 32.69; fifth, Scottie Trosclair, 29.71; sixth, Loston McEvers, 27.44; seventh, Carl Broussard, 24.86; eighth, Richard Duhon, 24.72; ninth. George Melancon, 24.36; and tenth, Jeb Linscombe, 24.24. There are club members following with 23 plus points, so the race is on.

GIBBSTOWN DOGFIGHT

David Duhon and Mike Guinn, I call "the old team," that has fished many dogfights and tournaments, and have won their share, won the Monday night week 13 Gibbstown Dogfight with 5 plus pounds. This was the same evening that evacuation was called for lower Cameron Parish. They did have strong winds, but anglers took their chances.

JULY 4 ACTION

A rodeo for family, friends, and public was held July 4 at (fishing rodeo in Hackberry.) Redfish first place, Paul Frey, 25 lbs. 8 ozs.; second place, Brandon Frey, 23 lbs., 6 ozs. Flounder first place, Johnny LeDoux, 2 lbs. 6 ozs.; second, Sharon Blocker, 2 lbs. Speckled trout first and second place went to Randy McGinty with a 7 and 6 lbs. 8 ozs. Largest fish Paul Frey, Grand Prize, Randy McGinty.

HARD LUCK PRIZE

The "Hard Luck" prize went to Texan Tim Bourgeois. Tim left Texas for a great fishing weekend with his family, stopped and got gas for the van, and left his wallet on top of the van. Yes, wallet lost. He put his boat in the water, but it wouldn't start. He gets the boat started and goes to the Cameron Jetties. He throws out the anchor, but the rope isn't tied, and he loses the anchor. Before all this, he had to buy another out-of-state license before fishing, and then his eleven year old daughter caught more fish than he did. This is one of those "forget-me-not" fishing
